Innovation

SEDCO have always led the way with care communications, often providing industry turning points adopted as basic requirements in future systems.

The basis of our product development is a simple and robust platform that is reliable and easy to support, having been built for long term use with a future upgrade path inbuilt into the original design.

- SEDCO released the world's first digital Nurse call platform - Gladstone, in the late 1970's.
- SEDCO developed the first Carephone in the 1980's. This product has gone on to be the cornerstone of Independent Living call systems, utilised today by most providers.
- SEDCO created the first Microprocessor based Nurse call system with talk back in the 1980's.
- SEDCO developed the first software based messaging integration platform (Message Centre) in 1996. This provides a single point of integration for a variety of services such as Fire systems, Security systems, Nurse call systems and Building Management systems with delivery of information to paging both local and wide area. The innovation provided by this initial design was adopted by many in the industry.
- SEDCO released the world's first Hybrid IP Nurse call platform in 2009.
